Regulation (EU) 2023/1115

Recital 30

Present textAmendment

(30) Operators and traders should be bound by the obligations under this Regulation regardless of whether the making available on the market takes place through traditional or online means. This Regulation should therefore ensure that in every supply chain there is an operator within the meaning of this Regulation who is established in the Union and can be held accountable in the event of non-fulfilment of the obligations under this Regulation. The Commission and the Member States should monitor the implementation of this Regulation and identify whether digital and technological developments require further specifications or initiatives, as appropriate, in the future.

(-1) Recital 30 is replaced by the following:

‘(30) Operators should be bound by the obligations under this Regulation regardless of whether the making available on the market takes place through traditional or online means. This Regulation should therefore ensure that in every supply chain there is an operator within the meaning of this Regulation who is established in the Union and can be held accountable in the event of non-fulfilment of the obligations under this Regulation. The Commission and the Member States should monitor the implementation of this Regulation and identify whether digital and technological developments require further specifications or initiatives, as appropriate, in the future.’

Or. en

Justification

Traders along the value chain should be excluded from the requirements of EUDR, as the initial operator has already provided the required documentation. This will avoid unnecessary administrative burden and the additional costs implied which may have a negative impact on prices and the availability of products covered in the scope of this regulation.

(53) Traders should be responsible for collecting and keeping information to ensure the transparency of the supply chain of relevant products which they make available on the market. Non-SME traders have a significant influence on supply chains and play an important role in ensuring that supply chains are deforestation-free. They should therefore have the same obligations as operators, take responsibility for the compliance of the relevant products with this Regulation and ensure, prior to making the relevant products available on the market, that they have exercised due diligence in accordance with this Regulation and have concluded that there is no or only a negligible risk that the relevant products do not comply with this Regulation.

Same as above, the traders should be excluded from the requirements of EUDR., to avoid unnecessary administrative burden and the additional costs implied which have a negative impact on prices and the availability of products covered in the scope of this regulation.

Amendment

(86) Operators, traders and competent authorities should be given a reasonable period in order to prepare themselves to meet the requirements of this Regulation.

(-1c) Recital 86 is replaced by the following:

‘(86) Operators, traders and competent authorities should be given a reasonable period in order to prepare themselves to meet the requirements of this Regulation. In the period before the date of application, and in order to avoid any delays, the Commission should prioritise the optimisation of the platform for the exchange of information between the relevant stakeholders and the competent authorities. The Commission also undertakes to publish the risk classification so that the relevant stakeholders can prepare for the defined mandatory scope of this Regulation. Both the platform for the exchange of information and the risk classification should be available and fully functioning at least six months before the date of application. In the event of further delays, the date of application should be postponed accordingly.’

Article 29 – paragraph 1

Present textAmendment(-1j) in Article 29, paragraph 1 is replaced by the following:

1. This Regulation establishes a three-tier system for the assessment of countries or parts thereof. For that purpose, Member States and third countries, or parts thereof, shall be classified into one of the following risk categories:

(a) ‘high risk’ refers to countries or parts thereof, for which the assessment referred to in paragraph 3 results in the identification of a high risk of producing in such countries or in parts thereof, relevant commodities for which the relevant products do not comply with Article 3, point (a);

(b) ‘low risk’ refers to countries or parts thereof, for which the assessment referred to in paragraph 3 concludes that there is sufficient assurance that instances of producing in such countries or in parts thereof, relevant commodities for which the relevant products do not comply with Article 3, point (a), are exceptional;

(c) ‘standard risk’ refers to countries or parts thereof which do not fall in either the category ‘high risk’ or the category ‘low risk.

‘1. This Regulation establishes a four-tier system for the assessment of countries or parts thereof. For that purpose, Member States and third countries, or parts thereof, shall be classified into one of the following risk categories:

(a) ‘high risk’ refers to countries or parts thereof, for which the assessment referred to in paragraph 3 results in the identification of a high risk of producing in such countries or in parts thereof, relevant commodities for which the relevant products do not comply with Article 3, point (a);

(b) ‘low risk’ refers to countries or parts thereof, for which the assessment referred to in paragraph 3 concludes that there is sufficient assurance that instances of producing in such countries or in parts thereof, relevant commodities for which the relevant products do not comply with Article 3, point (a), are exceptional;

(c) ‘standard risk’ refers to countries or parts thereof which do not fall in either the category ‘high risk’, ‘low risk’ or the category ‘no risk;

(ca) ‘no risk’ refers to countries or parts thereof that meet the following assessment criteria:

(i) forest area development has remained stable or has increased compared to 1990;

(ii) the Paris Agreement and international conventions on human rights and on preventing deforestation have been signed by those countries and parts thereof;

(iii) regulations on preventing deforestation and forest conservation at national level are strictly implemented and enforced in full transparency and monitored.’

Or. en

Justification

In countries with stable or increasing forest area development, the risk of deforestation under the regulation is negligible or non-existent. The targeting and proportionality of the regulation are therefore in serious doubt. Therefore, it will be essential to introduce ‘no risk’ category so that reporting obligations in these countries are simplified

Introducing a "no risk" category in the EUDR benchmarking system could streamline compliance for regions with strong, verified anti-deforestation measures, reducing administrative burdens for both regulators and businesses. This approach would reward countries actively protecting their forests, encourage other regions to improve their practices, and allow the EU to allocate resources more effectively toward higher-risk areas. The new category will offer an opportunity for countries to enforce stronger national deforestation laws and commit to cooperate with international climate and human rights conventions.

Two years postponement of the entry into force of the EUDR would allow enough preparedness time for global supply chains, particularly in developing countries, to adapt to the regulation's requirements. It would help companies implement necessary tracking systems and allow the EU to build adequate enforcement infrastructure. The delay would also reduce risks of unintended consequences, such as market exclusion or shifting deforestation pressures to less regulated regions, and ensure smoother, more equitable compliance across all stakeholders.
